Pre-departure Check List

- Gas – Make sure to have a full tank of gas when you arrive at the trail head.
- Tires – On side by sides, tires take a lot of abuse on rough terrain while carrying a heavy load. Before you load up and take off, check all your tires for signs of wear.
- Battery – Examine your battery, look for corrosion and rust on the posts. Corrosion and rust are signs you should replace your battery.
- Fluids – Check your oil and coolant.
- Filters – Air filters keep dust and other particulates out of the engine. You should check them regularly to make sure they're not too encrusted with dirt. Clean the intake area to make sure loose dirt isn't falling into the engine, and change air filters every 6 months or so. Keep an eye on the oil and fuel filters and make sure they are changed yearly.
- Radiator cap, spark plugs, and electrical – Check these regularly. Make sure there are no loose wires.
- CVT Drive Belt and Clutch Components - One component that takes the most stress and punishment is the CVT drive belt. The CVT drive belt is used to deliver the power from the motor to the transmission on almost every UTV on the market. It really takes abuse under hard driving conditions, heavy loads or even when modifications are made such as increasing tire size. If you've ever been driving and caught the smell of burning rubber, there's a good chance that your belt has been slipping and its integrity has been compromised. You'll want to check for any rips, tears, cracks and shiny hot spots on either side, and honestly it's not a bad idea to do this after every trip. If the belt shows any of the described signs or heat damage, you'll want to replace it immediately. It can break when you least expect it and potentially do damage to other components like transmission seals when it lets go.
